INSIDE MAS LA PLANA: Fifth-Generation Mireia Torres Maczassek Shares the Family's Home Vineyard and Flagship Icon Wine

As we embrace the change in seasons this month, fifth-generation Mireia Torres Maczassek joined us in New York, Florida, and California to share her family's most iconic Spanish wines from Catalunya—including a spotlight on the ageability and stylistic evolution of the flagship Mas La Plana.

Mas La Plana is the tête de cuvée from the Torres family, and it's also the name of their historical home in the Penedès for five generations. In 1970, 4th generation Miguel A. Torres planted Cabernet Sauvignon in his family's home vineyard, at a time when few were planting international varietals in Spain. In 1979, he entered his Mas La Plana wine into the Gault-Millau Wine Olympics – a blind tasting competition in Paris – where it was awarded first place, beating out the First Growth Bordeaux entrants. Fun bit of history!

Today Mas La Plana, crafted from the same Cabernet vines planted in 1970, stands as a symbol of bold innovation, and leads the way in regenerative viticulture. The vineyard's natural thriving ecosystem restores soil health, boosts biodiversity, and actively combats climate change.
